GHERKINS

We are a leading and reliable exporter of Gherkins that are of high quality and come with a high nutritional value. Gherkins are a variety of cucumbers that are used to make pickles. They retain their crunchiness when pickled. They have a sweet and sour flavour. Gherkins are grown only in South India where ideal soil type and desirable temperatures of not less than 15°C and not more than 35°C are found mainly in Karnataka, Tamil Nadu and Andhra Pradesh.

With best practices and raw materials, we are a leading producer and exporter of high-quality Gherkins across the world. Gherkins can be used in making burgers, salads and other snacks or can be used as a side dish. Usually, they are used with Italian, continental and oriental cuisine. Apart from delivering taste to your meal, it acts as a snack that you can munch on.

PICKLED GHERKINS

A pickled cucumber is pickled in a brine, vinegar, or other solution and left to ferment for a period of time, by either immersing the cucumbers in an acidic solution or through souring by lacto-fermentation. Pickled cucumbers are often part of mixed pickles.
